

Older Worker Awards

Working with the NC Employment Security Commission, the NC Division of Workforce Development, AARP-NC, the NC Institute on Aging's Interest Group on the Aging Workforce, and the Senior Community Service Employment Program's national and state sponsors—the NC Division Aging and Adult Services has established three awards to honor North Carolina's older workforce:

Mark M. Sabula Award recognizes the contributions of Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP) participants for their dedicated efforts to acquire the knowledge and skills needed to succeed in the workplace.

Ann B. Johnson Award recognizes the contributions of older workers for their special qualities and work ethic in the workplace. [no recipient was selected in this inaugural year]

Victor W. Marshall Award recognizes an employer in the state that has excelled in valuing the vital role of older persons in the workforce.
