

What is Usher Syndrome?

A syndrome is a condition which has at least two characteristics or symptoms. One such syndrome that causes deaf-blindness is Usher Syndrome, affecting half (50%) of the deaf-blind population. Usher Syndrome is a hereditary condition that results in hearing loss and progressive vision loss due to retinitis pigmentosa (RP). Symptoms of RP include: night blindness, peripheral (side) vision loss, and eventual central vision loss. Hearing loss of varying degrees is usually present at birth, and the onset of vision loss varies with each individual. Usher Syndrome is inherited when each parent carries a recessive gene that is passed on to the child who eventually is faced with the condition. There are three general types of Usher Syndrome.
