

Accessibility for All: AT for Community Inclusion

Thirty-three years ago, on July 26, 1990, the Americans with Disabilities Act was signed into law to ensure that people with disabilities have the same rights and opportunities as everyone else. The ADA is a driving force moving America closer to the promise of equal opportunity, full participation, independent living, and economic self-sufficiency for people with disabilities.

To celebrate the ADA's 33rd anniversary, we're highlighting the role of Assistive Technology in achieving community inclusion. For people with disabilities, AT promotes access to social and recreational opportunities, connectivity, and participation in community life.

Join us during Disability Pride month to hear from two North Carolinians and learn about some of the assistive technology that helps them pursue hobbies, socialize, and actively engage in the communities where they belong:
