

Specialized Alzheimer's disease and related Dementias Program

BMNTC's Specialized Alzheimer's disease and related Dementias Program is unique because it specifically serves those individuals whose aggressive or combative behavior make other living arrangements unavailable. Realizing that a neurocognitive diagnosis affects all aspects of a person's life, BMNTC addresses the physical, social, psychological, and spiritual aspects of quality living. Each individual's plan of care is developed, implemented, and monitored by the interdisciplinary team. Favorable staff to resident ratio and professional services alleviates many behaviors commonly associated with persons with Alzheimer's disease. BMNTC works closely with residents' families and community agencies to seek the most appropriate placement when the specialized services of their program are no longer needed. Applicants should meet the following criteria:

- The applicant has a neurocognitive diagnosis, which includes but is not limited to those individuals with moderate to severe diagnosis of probable Alzheimer's disease, Lewy Body, vascular dementia, or related dementia.
- The applicant's primary need is management of problem behaviors associated with the neurocognitive disorder. The applicant exhibits physically aggressive/combatative behaviors, making him/her potentially dangerous to self/others.
- Applicant is mobile.
- Applicant and or legal representative is a resident of North Carolina at the time of application.
